Highly entertaining as well as informative. A great read, whether you are behind the chair or in it. -Leigh Ann Cheek
Confessions of a Surly Barber is an insightful look into the business of barbering, from a barber's perspective. Due to the creation of unisex salons and franchised shops, traditional barbering could be in danger of becoming a lost art. As well as offering a brief history, it explains how barbering differs from cosmetology, and presents the reader with tips and suggestions that enable the customer to get the most out of their haircut experience. Written by a barber with over twenty-five years of experience, it is well researched and has a good dose of humor, honesty and sarcasm.

About the Author Mara Stewart's barbering career has spanned 25 years so far. She attended barber school away from home at the tender age of sixteen. She has worked her craft in many barbershops both large and small from Pompano Beach to Fort Pierce, Florida. She also lived and worked as a barber in Waldorf, Maryland. She was a barber school instructor for several years. Because of her success, she has been instrumental in influencing many others including her husband and several friends and relatives to learn the trade. Mara has owned and operated several barbershops in addition to managing several of the shops she's worked in.
