Noah runs a party planning business called Party Time left to him by his father. His mother, Rosalind Meyers, would do anything and go to any length, even coming to town in bad weather to get him married. After all, his mother believes that's what will bring him true happiness. The bright spot in his life is being a part-time coach of a Special Olympics team of pre-teen boys hoping to play basketball like everyone else. They look to Noah to help them fulfill that. Noah's only salvation is the person who understands him most and fixes everything for him is his office administrator and jacqueline of all trades, Annie. When the school Noah coaches at is threatened with closure, his mother comes to town, and a mysterious man joins the staff at Party Time, Annie begins to manage more than Noah's personal life. It's only a matter of time with the perfect woman is right there beside Noah that a budding romance takes shape. Marsha Casper Cook is a talented author and storyteller. Written as a screenplay, It's Never Too Late is witty, charming and an enjoyable read. You can imagine yourself backstage and watching the performance, seeing the characters come alive. I can't wait to see It's Never Too Late on the `big `screen.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. It's Never Too Late --by: Marsha Casper CookBy T.A.F. This is an excellent screenplay. For any writer wanting to learn the craft, Marsha shows you how to write a lean and professional script. Not only did I use "It's Never Too Late" as an educational tool as a writer, the storyline keeps your interest- I read straight through as the characters came to life on the pages. A fun and enjoyable piece- and we all can somehow relate to Noah or we probably know someone who reminds us of his mother. Excellent writing.

A screenplay in book form. Multi-Generational Romantic Comedy detailing the interactions between friends and family in a funny, true to life way. While reading this you will probably recognize someone you know and have a good laugh.
