James N. Healy : Jokes from the Pubs of Ireland before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Jokes from the Pubs of Ireland:

Notice hung in Harrys the other night. Honest Workman with corkscrew would like to hear from a widow with a pub!. We have a wild character who comes into Harrys. He is a young fellow named Billo with more money than he has earned, and a red face, which isn't from sunshine. The other day he was caught gunning his Mercedes (mark the word) the wrong way down the South Mall by a policeman, who asked him where he was going. Im not too sure, sez Billo through a kind of mist, but wherever it is I must be late, cos everybody seems to be coming back already.
