By DAVERATI bought these to use as postcards but the moment I took them out of the box, some teens that were over insisted on playing with the cards like a toy or a trading card game. Like the Website, the cards feature head to head match ups of adorable kittens. Their names are listed on the front and on the back of the card are their stats. The stats are printed rather small but in bright light, they aren't too hard to read. Even more fun were what the girls called "power cards" that depict up to six cats on each one and group them by the type of pictures. For example there is a card of kittens playing with computers and they are listed as "Special Unit: Technology Specialists". Other "power cards" include the Elite Fighting Unit, Climbing Battalion, Mobile Forces, Pouncing Strikeforce, Stealth Champions, and Agility Champions. There were also a few more special cards for the best paw to paw Combat Champion and the Winningest Kittens. The girls had so much fun playing with the cards, I had a hard time getting them back! I did eventually regain possession of the cards and write a few out to mail. The surface is good and matte for writing on and not slick like many postcards you buy today. They take a standard Postcard stamp which is currently 27 Cents and that's also a nice plus. Many postcard sets today are oversized and require a 42 Cent stamps. This is a delightful set and highly recommended as both a cute toy card pack and for mailing. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Cutesy. By Eric Adamaszek Cutesy. Nice heavy cardstock, though, should go through the mail with no problem.

Adorable felines battle it out for the title of cutest kitten in these postcards from the addictive and wildly popular Website kittenwar.com. Each postcard includes irresistible photographs and hilarious battle statistics such as Avian Observation Tactics and Paw to Paw Combat.

About the Author Kittenwar.com was founded in 2005 by Fraser Lewry and Tom Ryan. This massively popular and addictive Web site pits two photographs of adorable kittens side by side and asks the viewer to vote for his or her favorite. With over 75 million kitten battles fought, the Web site gets over 200,000 hits per day. Both Fraser and Tom live in the U.K. and have been cat lovers all their lives. The web site has been featured on numerous blogs, on TV, and in the press both in the U.S. and U.K.
