Michael S. Montgomery : The Amusing and Annoying Things Liberals Say From A to Z before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Amusing and Annoying Things Liberals Say From A to Z:

"The Amusing and Annoying Things Liberals Say From A - Z" chronicles the verbal blunders of left-wing politicians, celebrities and media figures. Commentary, often sharp and biting, accompany them. Compiled from online sources, the book doesn't intend to malign liberals. But it does seek to add balance to the political landscape. For too long, conservatives have been ridiculed in the national press while liberals' miscues go unreported. Al Gore, described by some in the media as too intelligent to be president, leads the parade with three dozen goofs. For example, he said "a zebra can't change its spots" and "a trillion is a million billion." Diane Sawyer of ABC news lavishes praise on Cuban dictator Fidel Castro, calling him "a dashing revolutionairy." She gives us "insight" into Iranian strongman Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. He supposedly cries when he hears of people hurt by natural disasters (though he vows to wipe Israel off the map). Madonna is blasted for comparing John McCain to Hitler in one of her concerts. The book also reveals the far left-wingers who surround or have influenced Barack Obama. From A - Z, "The Amusing and Annoying Things" entertains and informs in highly readable style.

About the Author Michael S. Montgomery has written for and edited several newspapers, including the New Orleans Times-Picayune. He has followed politics since 1964 when his father took him to a Barry Goldwater speech. He covered stories ranging from the image of Jesus appearing on a stop sign to cops seizing their own police station and the stock market crash. A graduate of Jesuit High School and the University of New Orleans, Montgomery lives with his wife Jo Anne and their cat Hoppy in Kenner, a New Orleans suburb.
