thinking. "This book seems hilarious, but will it look great casually thrown on random surfaces in my home?" Places this book looks great: Within reach of the commode, coffee tables with solid, see-through, and wine cork tops, in that magazine holder with the handle that falls off you bought at the flea market, currently holding all your copies of Southern Living, Forbes, or Family Fun. Granite counter tops or laminate ones you tried to paint because you saw the idea on Pinterest, even though your spouse was like, "Umm, not sure that's the best idea. What's Pinterest and why are you waiving that paint brush at the stove? Is that polycrylic you just poured down the sink?" (Like my experience, maybe that didn't turn out so great, but that won't have any affect on how funny this book is.) Why you? Why this book? Why now? Mostly destiny. But also because the jokes lovingly curated from Twitter are hilarious, relatable, and so much shorter than starting A Tale of Two Cities. Unless you're reading that right now. In which case, go ahead and finish because it's a classic and you want to be well-rounded, but then buy this book afterwards. Because you know there's a decorative bowl of fruit you'd just love to set it next to after you're finished laughing uncontrollably. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. I found it laugh out loud funny and if I wasn't laughing. By Julie Donato. Well, I purchased this as a Christmas gift for someone, but now I'm going to have to purchase another copy. I started just peeking in the pages and reading a few selections, but then I couldn't put the book down. I found it laugh out loud funny and if I wasn't laughing, I was nodding my head in agreement. As another reviewer mentioned, you do not need to understand twitter to get this book and find it highly entertaining. Although, I'm off to update my twitter feed with new people to follow!! 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Bite-sized hilarious nuggets of parenting truisms. By VL. With two kids running around, I don't get much time to read, much less figure out how The Twitter works and find the funniest tweets on it. This book has curated the best of the best so that you can spend your precious 60-second breaks reading only the funniest Twitter has to offer. I literally laughed out loud more times than I could count, and read every tweet twice because they were that good.

"The perfect book for parents who want -- NEED -- to laugh, but don't have time to sit down and read a daunting book. Grab it, head to the bathroom and lock the door until they find you!" — Jill Smokler, author of Confessions of a Scary Mommy "The Big Book of Parenting Tweets dishes up bite-size nuggets of funny. Impossible to read just one." — Jen Mann, author of People I Want to Punch in the Throat: Competitive Crafters, Drop-Off Despots, and Other Suburban Scourges This book is HILARIOUS. Being a parent is a frustrating, hilarious, weird, wild experience. This book captures some of the best of our snark. You need it. You do. — Nikki Knepper, author of Moms Who Drink and Swear A terrific read, featuring some of the funniest (and most honest) parents in the Twitterverse... my go-to gift for new parents! — Johanna Stein, author of How Not To Calm A Child On A Plane and Other Parenting Advice from a Questionable Source Twitter isn't just for breaking news and celebrity stalking—it's also a goldmine of the funniest comedy online. Jokes? People tell jokes on Twitter? YES, they do. And they are hilarious ... but who wants to sift through the hashtags, RTs and FFs to get to the good stuff? WE GET IT! Parents don't have time for all that. That's why the duo behind the illustrated humor blog Science of Parenthood teamed up with Twitter maven Kate Hall of Hall of Tweets to create The Big Book of Parenting Tweets —a laugh-riot collection of more than three-hundred tweetable moments straight from the parenting trenches from the most hysterical comedians on Twitter, who just happen to be parents. Here is just a peek at some of what you'll find inside: My 4yo is trying to sell my own MM's back to me. This guy's going places.— @FatherWithTwins With my wife away, my children keep asking me for things like meals and bandaids and sympathy, but I don't know where we keep any of that.— @KalvinMacleod She took 4 y/o to the park texted "Can I get her ice-cream?" Get her a Heineken for all I care. Free babysitters get to call the shots.— @BunmiLaditan I wish bottles of ibuprofen came with a little prize inside, like maybe a babysitter.— @SuburbanSnaps To anyone out there thinking about having kids, today my 2yo threw a temper tantrum because she couldn't get rid of her shadow. — @XplodingUnicorn Peppered with cartoons by Science of Parenthood, The Big Book of Parenting Tweets is the perfect gift for every over-worked, under-showered, sleep-deprived parent who could use a quick laugh, because who has time for more?
